GEN HANCOCK'S LETTER The necessity of writing a letter of acceptance was a sore one to General Hancock, for the ct and independent power that there is in like manner as his party had felt the ne- n) American nationality that each man is a cessity of framing a platform so as to dedge not only aving issues but the record it has made so General Hancock found himself in a letter and yet who was under the most extraordinary constrain). The result is apper nt in the letter which has been given through our columns. On hone of the questions which have been before the country for cratio party date to make an open appeal to ance that there is no such entity as the peothe people in support of its own position. It is forced to be entirely silent or to dodge pattern and equivocate it dires not even in a very support of the United States, but each man is of the United States, but each man seert openly the doctrines which get affirmed due his primary allegiance and loval of congress and as for the future as it wants stoke and nopes to get them from every quarter by a non-committal policy, it refuses the take any propounced position on committee the control of the control of the second of the control of the contro to take any pronounced position on questions of tariff the currency internal im- of the party on his ground | It is the very provements the civil service or any of the subjects prominently before the country 1; was under this stress of circumstances that claiming the right to declare and exercise General Hancock had to write a letter of acceptance The reader will look through it in federation which they asserted existed only vain for any reference to those large ques tions of public policy on which General Gar-field a letter is explicit and full. It was not ing to offend the large section of his party to to be expected that the democratic candidate which he looks for his thief support refuses would express his approval of the past course of his party, or declars to the country nationality but gives us instead the subtle that the purposes and tendencies of the party

This, in brief, is the histery of harker the present democratic candidate and his par ty in regard to the amendments which they have so often tried to destroy, but which bit ter experience has now taught them that it is best to say are 'inviolante' Of course the party has not actually changed its purposes It is still as hostile to the amendments in fact as it was too warm ago. Were Hancock he could not entures the amendment against his party, which has sol-emnly pronounced and always held them 'mnoonstructional, revolutionary and void," Besides, the very fact that the candidate thinks it necessary to make this declaration so prominent casts additional suspicion on his pa ty. Except from that party is no menace to the amendments. The candidate a declaration in therefore at once a con-fession that his party is under just suspicion for hostility to the amendments, and an attempt to quiet that well-founded distract a record for hostility to the amendments, and who made their during sition to overthrow the amendmen a the issue before the country a few years ago are not likely now to quiet public apprehen mon by the mere pledge of a candidate a eking votes that the articles which they have fringht heretofors with intense bitterness and their eyes and in fact so sacred as to be samgled out from all other parts of the constitu tion and declared to be specially inviolable.

We have next in the letter a quibbing caspistical and heir-splitting dissertation on atate : gats Here we have a sop thrown to the confederate democracy It happens that General Hancock was one of those who fought against that destructive principle o state supremacy,—but he was not then seek ing the pres dency. In his letter he carefully avoids asserting the principle for which he fought, namely the maintenance of Ameri tan nationality against the assumed sove than principle would be offeasive to his supporters of the confidence school, treld a set at that we are distincly a planton Instead of his a affirmation of this prigniple which want the foundation of our party de visione we have in General Hancock's letter ides of the relations of the states to the general governmen, which doesn't differ from what we should expect and have repairedly had from southern politicians of the confederate stamp and their northern followers. between the two carties a difference which ies at the very foundation of the union. The democratic party of which General Hancock is now the standard bearer and representative s founded on the doctrine that this is a me e confederation of sovereign states and not a nation the each state is of itself a discitizen of a confederacy by virtue of being or marrily a citizen of one of these 'overeign states and not a citizen o an entire country by virtue of being a ci zen of the Umited States of America that the political organi zation known as the government of the United States is a mere agency of the several supreme states deriv ngi s powers from those almighty supreme states, and existing by so rereign consent and at their suffer
